One thing is for certain – we live in an age of overindulgence!

- Computers in child’s bedroom
- Television in room
- Telephone
- Cell phone
- Parent-financed credit card
- Car or motorcycle
- Horse
- Allowance
Parents are concerned about overindulging their children.

Children are concerned about overindulgence

“Freedom can be a source of trouble. Kids today often wander anywhere and do almost anything they want to. They often don't talk to their parents very much and instead decide on their own what to do, and then do it. The less the parents are home, the sloppier children become at their chores or homework.”

“A spoiled kid needs his or her parents to help the spoiling process…I think that the kids are more spoiled, but the parents are less responsible.”

Comparative Resources

- U.S. Adolescents spend $141 billion dollars each year.
- That’s more than the GDP of Afghanistan ($21B), Democratic Republic of the Congo ($32 B) and Cuba ($25.5 B) combined.

Our Mission

The overindulgence project began in 1996 with the mission of studying the relationship between childhood overindulgence, subsequent adult problems, and parenting practices.

www.overindulgence.info
To date, we have conducted three studies investigating overindulgence involving a combined 1,195 participants.
The Overindulgence Project

• Study I: “Perceptions Attributed by Adults to Parental Overindulgence During Childhood”;

• Study II: “Relationships Between Childhood Overindulgence, Family Cohesion and Adaptability, Self-Esteem, Self-Efficacy, Self-Righteousness, Satisfaction with Life, Dysfunctional Attitudes and Life Distress in Late Adolescence and Young Adulthood”; and

• Study III: “Relationships Between Childhood Overindulgence, Family Cohesion and Adaptability, Self-Esteem, Dysfunctional Attitudes and Locus of Control in Parents.”
• Study III Used a web-based system collecting data from 391 participants (11.0% male; 89% female from 39 states and 12 additional countries).

• Participants were recruited in five ways:
  1. participants attending workshops;
  2. trained parent facilitators;
  3. parents attending parenting classes;
  4. a list serve for certified family life educators, and
  5. word of mouth.
Study III: Psychological Scales

- In addition to a standard consent form and demographic information, each subject filled out the following psychological scales:

1. FACES (Olson, Portner & Lavee, 1986);
2. The Rosenberg Self-Esteem Scale (Rosenberg, 1979);
3. The Dysfunctional Attitude Scale (Weissman, 1979 & 1980);
4. The Parental Locus of Control Scale (Campis, Lyman, & Prentice-Dunn, 1986).
5. And fourteen author-developed likert-style questions on overindulgence.
Is there a relationship between childhood overindulgence, family adaptability, family cohesion, self-esteem and dysfunctional attitudes in adulthood? Yes and no.

- Family Adaptability, $r = .129^*$
- Family Cohesion, $r = -.095$
- Self-esteem, $r = -.101^*$
- Dysfunctional Attitude Scale, $r = -.227^{}$

Are there three types of overindulgence: Overindulgence (Too Many Things), Structural Overindulgence (Lack of Rules, Soft Structure), and Relational Overindulgence (Over-nurture)? Yes.

- First, we found statistically significant correlations between the responses to “Do you think you were overindulged as a child?” and every one of the thirteen Indicators of Overindulgence. (Range: r=.151 to .544)
